FOR NATIONAL SECURITY—

Navy Supply Corps
REAR ADM. C. W. FOX, SC, USN
Chief, Bureau of Supplies and Accounts
Navy Department

MODERN science has radically revolutionized concepts in supporting a Navy. As the technical revolution of the last few decades changed the design and construction of the naval vessel, so did it complicate and diversify the supply needs of combatant forces. At the same time, technological advancement made it imperative that the Supply Corps officers of the Navy be not only intimately skilled in the commercial science of business administration but also thoroughly trained in the logistical complexities of technical warfare.

Rear Adm. Fox

The Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, through its some 3,000 Supply Corps officers, is vigorously emphasizing the essentiality of adequate supply support for the Naval Operating Forces. It is of paramount concern to the Navy that such supply support be intelligently conceived, economically planned, and efficiently performed. Because of his specialized skills and advanced training in the fields of finance, distribution, and management, the Supply Corps officer of today is a vital cog in the gears which move the Navy. His role in naval supply management has been directly affected by the transition of the Navy to a highly technical machine.

Within the memory of most Service personnel, the "beans and bullets" concept of supply has changed. The lowly electron tube has opened up a vast supply field in electronics. Modern ordnance equipments with their highly technical fire control items have evolved an ordnance supply program involving literally thousands of individual pieces of equipment. Modernized shipboard propulsion plants and complicated ship structure and design have brought to the fore a highly developed ships parts supply program. From a World War I level of approximately 60,000 items, technical advancement has increased the number of bits and pieces in the Navy Supply System to a present-day estimate of approximately 5,000,000.

The key structure upon which the Navy's current supply organization is built is the Navy Supply System, approved by the Secretary of the Navy on 14 Feb. 1947. Through this systematic procedural business plan, all the business techniques

Finletter Supports
More Top Air Rank

In his first appearance before a Congressional Committee as Secretary of the Air Force, Secretary Finletter this week made a strong defense of the Department's request for equality with the Army and Navy in the matter of three and four star generals.

The Air Force's plea for five 4-star and 22 3-star generals, instead of the present 4 and 13 in these categories, is justified, Secretary Finletter told the House Armed Forces Committee, "from the standpoint of good business and efficient management, as well as the fulfillment of the military mission involved. This increase, which can be achieved at an annual cost of less than $7,000 would enable us to provide recognition of great responsibility through commensurate rank. Responsibility and authority are inseparable and authority impliedly stems from position and rank."

Representative Vinson (D-Ga.), chairman of the Committee, suggested that the billets to be held by four-star generals should be specified in the law. Secretary Finletter, however, objected, claiming it "would be too inflexible and against unification, would prevent transfer to other assignments, and interfere with the flexibility of the Office of Defense."

When Representative Vinson insisted in his belief that the five billets should be "tacked down and classified," Mr. Finletter replied that in that case the same should be done for the other Services. Mr. Vinson said that he intends to see that such is done.

Lt. Gen. Idwal H. Edwards, Acting Chief of Staff, Operations, who formerly was Deputy for Personnel, presented the detailed plea for the increases in rank. He said:

"Under existing legislation, the Air Force is limited to 17 top-ranking officers in the grade of lieutenant general and above—this as compared to the authorization for 27 such officers in the Army and 26 in the Navy."

"This statutory limitation which was imposed on the Air Force while still a part of the War Department is seriously impeding the Chief of Staff in his exercise of command, and is adversely affecting the ability of the Air Force to carry out its world-wide responsibilities. We are unable in many instances to provide officers of rank commensurate with positions of great command and staff responsibility—not only within the command structure of the Air Force itself, but also on joint staffs composed of members of our land-sea-air team, and on combined command and staff organizations composed of American officers and officers of other nations."

"This limitation has also given rise to a situation in which flexibility in assignments to key positions and in rotation to overseas commands has been reduced to an unworkable minimum. In order to provide for normal rotation of the overseas commanders, it is necessary that the top command and staff structure of the Air Force be completely reshuffled at frequent and relatively short intervals. This situation is obviously contrary

Flag Officer Legislation

Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, USN, Chief of Naval Operations, has told a House Armed Services subcommittee, through a statement by Vice Adm. John Roper, USN, Chief of Personnel, that two changes are desired in the Senate-passed legislation pertaining to forced elimination of flag officers.

One proposed change would strike out a provision which states that a flag officer, even though he completes five years in flag rank and 35 years' service, does not become eligible for consideration by the retention board if at some time he has lost numbers or precedence, until the officer next junior to him who has never lost numbers or precedence, becomes eligible.

Admiral Roper said this provision should be eliminated "since it gives an officer who at some previous time has lost precedence a longer opportunity to serve on the active list than one who has

Right To Grade E-7
Assured Reserves

THE Army has decided to extend indefinitely the opportunity for Reserve officers now on active duty to enlist as master sergeants when their commissioned status is terminated.

The new Army policy provides also that non-Regular officers and warrant officers who were serving in enlisted status on or before 7 Dec. 1941, are to be enlisted upon separation from officer or warrant officer status in the temporary pay grade held on discharge from enlisted Federal service to accept commission or warrant officer appointment.

The new policy will be a great aid to service morale. Under the old policy a large body of officers who had served continuously since the beginning of the war were in danger of losing their right to enlist as master sergeants, while those who had dropped their commissions some time ago and re-enlisted were now again serving as officers with their top enlisted rank guaranteed to them. The discontent and unrest engendered by this situation was frequently reflected in Letters to The Editor, as printed in THE JOURNAL.

Previously, unless a non-Regular officer or warrant officer had held the top enlisted pay grade in the Regular Army prior to accepting commission or warrant appointment, he was not assured of enlistment as a master sergeant if he chose to continue commissioned service beyond 1951.

Now, the Army states that non-Regular officers and warrant officers on active duty, who were on active duty on 22 March 1948, can have master sergeant rank if they enlist within 24 hours after separation from commissioned service.

Because of its great importance to Reserve officers, the full text of the Army communication on the subject of extension

Air-Army Functions
Given New Stress

The Air Force and the Army will accelerate training in air transportability and close air-ground tactical support, with immediate strengthening of the Tactical Air Force.

The Air Force reorganization to place added emphasis on its tactical responsibilities in support of ground troops comes after last week's corollary announcement that henceforth the primary mission of the Military Air Transport Service is to be the training of additional crews for airborne operations.

Coinciding with this week's disclosure that the Tactical Air Force, field command of the Tactical Air Command, is to be assigned permanent operational control over five Air Force groups was the announcement that Lt. Gen. Lauris Norstad, USAF, has been named Acting Vice Chief of Staff of the Air Force.

General Norstad, it is recalled, recently was commanding general of Exercise Swarmer, the mammoth airborne maneuvers in North Carolina, from which valuable lessons were gained in air transportability and close air support for ground troops.

Information obtained from this exercise is expected to be of vital importance in future formulation of airborne doctrine by the Air Force and the Army.

Air Force officials declined to state whether General Norstad would be made permanent Vice Chief of Staff, a post which calls for a fourth star. It had been speculated that following Exercise Swarmer, General Norstad, Deputy Chief for Operations since Oct. 1947, would be given a field assignment, probably that of commanding general, Alaskan Air Command, a post held presently by Lt. Gen. Nathan Twining, USAF.

Since the death of General Muir S. Fairchild on 17 March, the names of General Norstad, General Twining and Lt. Gen. Idwal Edwards, USAF, Acting Deputy for Operations, have been mentioned most prominently in connection with appointment as Vice Chief of Staff.

The Air Force disclosure this week of plans to bolster the Tactical Air Force is expected to go a long way toward providing adequate training in close air support of infantry, armored and airborne Army units.

Although there has been little public criticism by Army officials of Air Force inadequacies in air transportability and tactical aviation training, it is known that the Army feels its training program has been hampered severely by shortages in troop carriers and close-support air units.

It is recalled that these shortages were emphasized in the final report made by General Jacob L. Devers, when he retired last year from his post as Chief of Army Field Forces.

His successor, General Mark Clark, is reported to have submitted a memo-

Kansas City Star—"It is because of the more disturbed international situation of today that Secretary of Defense Johnson has requested a moderate increase in the appropriation for the Air Force. . . . It seems to be entirely justified in the light of present conditions. This is no time to be taking chances on our national defense structure."

Houston Post—"If war is imminent, Congress ought to make adequate provision for defense. Moreover, in that event Congress should give prompt consideration to the passage of standby mobilization legislation, as urged by W. Stuart Symington, new chairman of the National Security Resources Board. We do not seem to be much more ready for war now than we were in 1941; while Russia has her guns loaded and cocked."

Seattle Times—"If present and proposed procurement levels are maintained, by the year 1961 the Navy and Marine Corps will be able to operate only 3000 airplanes, compared with 6223 in 1951 and 10,713 in 1949. It is not an impressive outlook."

Salem, Oreg., Capital Journal—"It is a relief to know that while we are not yet well prepared for defense, we are on the way and not asleep on the job of making war so terrible to aggressors that peace may result."

Baltimore Sun—"It is an election year and a good many Congressmen appear to believe that extension of the draft would somehow damage their political fortunes. We doubt it. We believe that the importance of keeping the draft machinery in being and ready at a moment's notice to begin moving, is recognized by most thoughtful citizens."

House Group Favors New Army Basic Law

The House Armed Services Committee this week reported favorably the new Army Organization Bill, which would enact into permanent law many features of the current Army organization developed under the war powers of the President.

The Bill reported is H.R. 8198, which is a committee revision of H.R. 5794, the measure recommended by the Department of Defense. The committee measure provides a great degree of flexibility and gives the Secretary of the Army wide discretionary powers. However, it does not go as far in this direction as was proposed by the Defense Department.

The new measure establishes the various branches of the Army as requested by the department, but it does not give the Secretary of the Army authority, as originally proposed, to abolish or consolidate branches or to create new ones, except in time of war or national emergency.

Among the limitations imposed are restrictions on the number of officers on duty in Washington, and on the length of tours and eligibility for service in the Department of the Army and with the General Staff. As proposed by the department the Secretary would have had unrestricted authority to assign officers within the department and to the General Staff.

The first committee draft restricted the number of officers on duty in the department to 2,700 and the number serving on or with the General Staff to 500. However, this was subsequently raised to a maximum of 3,000 in the Department and 1,000 with the General Staff. There are at present in the department 2,645 officers, with 975 detailed to the General Staff.

The bill limits tours of duty with the department to four years and makes an officer ineligible for reassignment to the department for a period of two years. This re-enacts a previous provision of law for rotation of duty in Washington. The bill authorizes the Secretary of the Army to make exceptions when the public interest requires.

Under the Organization Bill the Cavalry arm officially passes out of existence and is replaced by Armor. Coast Artillery and Field Artillery are combined into the Artillery branch, and the Transportation Corps and Military Police Corps are given statutory authorization. This proposed legislation would serve to make permanent the organization now in effect under Executive Orders.

The bill makes no provision for Chiefs of Infantry, Field Artillery, Coast Artillery, and Cavalry. These offices are provided for in existing law, but have long been vacant. The omission of provision for their continuance abolishes these offices.

Several obsolete laws are repealed by the new bill. Among them are those providing for Indian Scouts, and for the maintenance of a stable in the District of Columbia for the horses and carriages of the President.

In the new measure the functions of each branch are no longer detailed as is the case with existing laws. Instead the Secretary of the Army is given broad authority to prescribe duties and to reassign them in accordance with the needs of the Service.

Following is the full text of the summary and conclusions of Mr. Kilday's report:

Finally, it is appropriate to summarize briefly the main features of the proposed measure, with particular emphasis upon what new provisions of law are contemplated.

1. The Secretary of the Army is made responsible for all of the affairs of the Army Establishment and is given authority commensurate with that responsibility. In general, separate authorities to subordinate officers or branches will be eliminated.

2. The Army Staff will consist of the Chief of Staff, Vice Chief of Staff, and Assistant Chiefs of Staff, other important officers heretofore named in this report, and such other members of the Army and such civilian officers and employees as the Secretary may prescribe.

3. The Chief of Staff of the Army will be appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to serve during the pleasure of the President. Heretofore the law has not prescribed that the Chief of Staff be confirmed by the Senate.

4. The statutes fixing responsibilities and duties of the Chief of Staff are substantially reenacted, except that henceforth the law will require the Chief of Staff to be directly responsible to the Secretary of the Army for the efficiency of the Army, its state of preparation for military operations and plans therefor. This places direct responsibility upon the Chief of Staff for these three important functions.

5. A Vice Chief of Staff and three Deputy Chiefs of Staff will be authorized by statute. Previous to the First War Powers Act, the Army had no Vice Chief of Staff and only one Deputy Chief of Staff.

6. The Chief of Transportation and Provost Marshal General are provided for by statute for the first time.

7. The offices of Chief of Infantry, Chief of Cavalry, Chief of Field Artillery, and Chief of Coast Artillery will be abolished by statute.

8. The number of officers on duty in the Department of the Army will be limited to 3,000, of whom not more than 1,000 may be assigned to duty on or with the Army General Staff. There are approximately 2,645 officers on duty in the Department of the Army at this time, of whom approximately 975 are detailed to or on duty with the General Staff.

9. Officers assigned to duty in the Department of the Army will be limited to a 4-year tour of duty, and may not be reassigned to the Department of the Army for a period of 2 years.

10. The existing two kinds of branches in the Army will be designated as basic branches and special branches. For the duration of any war or national emergency hereafter declared, but only for such period, the Secretary of the Army would have the authority to establish new basic branches, or discontinue or consolidate the existing basic branches. This authority is not applicable to the special branches.

11. The Transportation Corps and the Military Police Corps, now in existence under the First War Powers Act, will be established by statute among the basic branches of the Army. The Armor will replace the Cavalry as a basic branch of the Army. The Artillery branch will be a consolidation of the Field Artillery and the Coast Artillery Corps. There will be no change in any of the existing branches that are classified as special branches.

12. The name Medical Department will be changed to the Army Medical Service and the title of the Adjutant General's Department, Finance Department, and Ordnance Department will be changed to Adjutant General's Corps, Finance Corps, and Ordnance Corps.

It is also important to call attention to what the proposed legislation does not do:

1. Existing laws pertaining to the Chief of Engineers and the Corps of Engineers are not altered by this bill. Neither their military nor their civil functions will be changed. A provision in the bill makes the officer and enlisted strengths of the Corps of Engineers, as provided in the National Defense Act of 1916, as amended, minimum rather than maximum strengths.

2. The bill does not modify or amend laws pertaining to the National Guard or the Organized Reserve Corps.

3. The bill does not change existing laws pertaining to promotion, retirement, and pay. It specifically provides that no person shall be entitled to any right, privilege, or benefit not heretofore authorized by law.

4. The bill will not in any way alter or modify the provisions of the National Security Act of 1947, as amended.

5. The bill does not involve any additional cost to the Government.

In conclusion, this bill will provide a permanent and flexible statutory basis for the organization of the Army and the Department of the Army in broad and simple terms, and will place the current organization on a firm basis independent of existing temporary authority under title I of the First War Powers Act. If some new legislation is not enacted before the expiration of the First War Powers Act, all the changes made pursuant to that act will become null and void and it will be necessary for the Army and the Department of the Army to revert to the organization existing in 1941, which would not only be undesirable, but would result in the reestablishment of a now antiquated organization.

The subcommittee adopted several amendments, most of them technical in nature. As previously mentioned, the number of officers authorized to be assigned or detailed to permanent duty in the Department of the Army has been limited to 3,000. The bill originally provided for only 2,700; but the subcommittee, after careful consideration, decided that the 2,700 limitation did not permit sufficient latitude for an increase that might be required for defense purposes.

For the same reason, the limitation on the number of officers who may be assigned or detailed to duty with the General Staff was increased from 500 to 1,000.

The remaining amendments do not affect the substantive provisions of the bill, but merely clarify ambiguous language, or correct errors in punctuation.

As amended, I move that the bill, H. R. 8198, be favorably reported to the House.

Capt. Montgomery L. McCullough, Jr., Secretary of the Permanent Naval Uniform Board, and Capt. Joy Bright Hancock, Assistant to the Chief of Naval Personnel for Women, model the new evening dress uniforms authorized by the Secretary of the Navy for commissioned officers of the U. S. Navy.

Possession and wearing of the uniforms, to be worn on occasions when civilian evening dress is appropriate, will be optional for all officers until 1 July 1951. After that date, it will become mandatory for officers of the rank of commander and above, except Reserve and temporary officers. The boat cloak worn by Captain McCullough, is an optional item.

Gold sleeve stripes and corps devices replace the light blue stripes and devices worn by women of the Navy.

Retained in Regular Navy

Thirty-seven Navy officers commissioned from aviation-midshipman status have been selected for retention in the Regular Navy.

Alnav 46 stated that "the recommendations of a board convened to consider officers commissioned pursuant to Public Law 729—79th Congress, amended, from aviation-midshipman status during 1949, who applied for retention in the Regular service as permanent officers in accordance with BUPers Circular Letter 174-48, have been approved" as follows:

Annual Leave Threatened

The House-passed provision restricting the right to annual leave of civilian Government employees may be interpreted as applying to officers of the Armed Services, Budget Director Fred Lawton told the Senate Appropriations Committee this week.

While the House intended the restriction to apply only to civilian employees, Director Lawton said, it appears that the way in which it is drawn means that it will apply to Service officers but not enlisted personnel.

The amendment would require Federal workers to take annual leave as they earn it or else forfeit the leave. Director Lawton opposes this limitation.

Disability Pay Rules

The Army and the Air Force have issued identical regulations covering disability retirement and severance pay in accordance with Public Law 351, 81st Congress, the Career Compensation Act.

The new regulations are retroactive to 1 Oct. 1949, the effective date of the Act. The pertinent Army Regulations are 35-1355 and those of the Air Force 173-104.

Under the new regulations a person retired subsequent to 1 Oct. 1949 for disability is placed on the Temporary Disability Retired List for a period not to exceed five years during which he is entitled to receive retired pay based on percentage of disability or length of service, but in no case more than 75 per cent or less than 50 per cent of his active duty pay, while he is carried on the Temporary List.

Retired pay will be based on the highest permanent or temporary grade satisfactorily held. If the disability is disclosed as a result of examination for promotion his pay will be based on the active duty pay of the grade to which he would have been promoted, were it not for the disability.

Those previously retired who are on active duty subsequent to retirement and incur a disability of more than 30 per cent or aggravate the disability for which retired pay was received will be entitled to receive retired pay either under the new law or under the law in effect at the time of retirement.

If as a result of periodic physical examination or at the end of the five-year period it is determined that a person should be permanently retired he will be entitled to retirement pay in accordance with the new law, based either on length of service or on percentage of disability disclosed at the time of permanent retirement.

A person who has more than 20 years' service, but is less than 30 per cent disabled, may elect to receive retired pay based on length of service or severance pay, or, if eligible, to be transferred to the inactive list, and receive retired pay at the age of 60.

That part of the disability retirement pay computed on service which exceeds that due for percentage of disability is subject to income tax. All retirement pay based on percentage of disability is exempt from Federal income tax. Members of the Reserve components retired for disability are entitled to the same pay, rights, benefits and privileges granted to retired Regulars.

If a person who has been placed on the Temporary Disability Retired List is subsequently found to be physically qualified for active duty his retirement pay will be terminated. If he is an officer of the Regular Services he will be recalled to active duty. If he is a Regular enlisted man he will be re-enlisted in the component from which retired. If he is an officer or enlisted man of a Reserve component he will be reappointed or re-enlisted. In case a person does not consent to reappointment or re-enlistment his retirement pay will be terminated.

Any enlisted man or warrant officer who served as a commissioned officer between 6 April 1917 and 11 Nov. 1918 is entitled to receive retired pay based on the highest grade held in World War I. However, any person in this category may, upon application within one year, be restored to his former warrant or enlisted grade on the retired list.

Disability severance pay for those who do not qualify for retirement, because their percentage of disability is less than 30 per cent and their service is insufficient, is fixed at two months' active duty pay of the highest grade satisfactorily held multiplied by years of service, but not to exceed two years' basic pay. The amount of severance pay received will be deducted from any compensation received by the person or his dependents from the Veterans' Administration for the same disability.

Lt. Col. LeRoy H. Barnard, CMP, Chief, Personnel Security Branch, Office of the Provost Marshal General, was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States on 15 May.

To Make 350 Temp. Cols.

The Army has made plans for the promotion by 30 June of approximately 350 of the 579 officers recently selected for temporary advancement to the rank of colonel.

Of the 350 promotions, THE JOURNAL was told, about 270 will be from among the 416 Army Promotion List and 84 Reserve officers selected for temporary advancement. The remainder must wait for future vacancies.

In addition to these 500 selections, 79 officers on the various special promotion lists, such as Medical Corps and Chaplains Corps, are presently on an eligibility list for temporary promotion to colonel. Indications are that all of these officers are to receive the higher grade by 30 June.

It is recalled that the complete list of officers selected for temporary promotion to colonel was printed in the 15 Apr. issue of THE JOURNAL. Although published in alphabetical order, the list also included the precedence standing of each officer in the selection proceedings.

The disclosure that the temporary promotions are to be made by the end of the current fiscal year follows Senate confirmation of Presidential nominations for the promotion of 112 Army Promotion List and 58 special promotion list officers for advancement to permanent rank of colonel. These names were published in the 6 May issue.

The 112 permanent promotions were made from 380 selections on the Army Promotion List.

The promotions to colonel will permit the Army to promote shortly the majority of officers who have been waiting for permanent promotions to the ranks of lieutenant colonel, major and captain, following their selection last year. Army personnel officials said the majority of the following officers awaiting promotion will receive permanent advancement by 30 June.

Right to E-7 Grade

sion of categories and enlistment upon termination of extended active duty is published herewith:

Pending publication of amendment to SR 615-105-1, non-regular officers and warrant officers now on extended active duty who were serving in enlisted status in active federal service on or before 7 December 1941 will henceforth be enlisted, on separation from officer or warrant officer status under honorable conditions, in the temporary pay grade held on their discharge from active enlisted federal service to accept commission or warrant officer appointment. The individual must enlist on the day following separation from officer or warrant officer status to take advantage of this provision. This does not affect the eligibility of an officer or warrant officer to be enlisted under the National Defense Act in the permanent enlisted pay grade held in the Regular Army on discharge, within six months of separation from officer or warrant officer status.

In implementation of the foregoing policy, officers or warrant officers who held the grade of first sergeant, whether permanent or temporary, will be authorized to enlist in Grade E-7.

Pending publication of amendment to SR 135-215-5, the following changes are effective immediately:

"5. Applications for renewal of category. All officers who are qualified under the provisions of paragraph 4 and who desire extended active duty beyond the expiration date of current category will submit letter of application for new category. The letter will be in sufficient copies so that two signed copies will be available for transmittal to The Adjutant General. Application will be submitted not earlier than 8 months nor later than 6 months prior to expiration of current category, except that should an officer be promoted during the six-month period prior to his separation, he may apply for a new category.

"a. Officers' applications will contain the following statement:

"Under provisions of SR 135-215-5, 27 May 1949, as changed, the undersigned desires to serve on extended active duty in Category to be effective and expiring. My present category expires. I understand that if this request for the renewal of my category is approved by The Adjutant General, such approval is considered to be an official statement of my new category in accordance with paragraph 6f of SR 135-215-5, 27 May 1949 as changed."

"b. Officers who do not desire to apply for a new category during the prescribed time limits will be required to sign a statement in duplicate substantially as follows: 'I have this date been afforded an opportunity to apply for a new category as provided in paragraph 5, SR 135-215-5, 27 May 1949, as changed, and do not desire to do so. I understand that I may not be permitted to apply for a new category at a later date.' The original statement will be placed in the officer's field military 201 file and one copy will be forwarded to the Adjutant General, Attention AGPO-S-C.

"6. Processing of applications.

"a. Applications will be forwarded as follows:

- (1) Department of the Army agencies (reference D/A Memo 230-10-1, 28 March 1950) and commanders of Class II installations will forward two signed copies of each application direct to the Adjutant General, Attention: AGPO-S-C for final action.
- (2) Applications of Army officers serving with the Department of the Air Force will be processed under provisions of these regulations, except commands normally commanded by a general officer will forward applications to Headquarters, Department of the Air Force, for transmittal to the Adjutant General.

"(3) Applications of Army officers serving with the Department of the Navy will be forwarded to The Adjutant General, Attention AGPA-A, through the local naval commander and the Army unit of administrative attachment.

"(4) Two signed copies of all other applications except those under paragraph 4c above will be forwarded by the command normally commanded by a general officer to The Adjutant General, Attention: AGPO-S-C. Major commanders may direct that applications be forwarded through their commands.

"b. Applications will be forwarded through channels and each indorsement will indicate a recommendation for approval or disapproval, with detailed reasons in all cases for the latter. Disapproval will be recommended if the officer does not qualify under paragraph 4 above, or is considered undesirable for further retention on extended active duty by reason of relatively low efficiency, inaptness, misconduct, lack of attention to duty, lack of initiative or other cogent reasons.

"c. After final action each application will be returned through the same channels to the organization having custody of the officer's record for inclusion in his military 201 file. Appropriate entries will be made in items 11 and 22 of WD AGO Form 66 (Officers', Warrant Officers' and Flight Officers' Qualification Record) and on unit morning report, indicating new category and date of expiration. New categories will be computed as beginning the first day of the month following the expiration date of current categories. Categories I, II, or V signed in accordance with the provisions of 4b and c will expire on the last day of the month in which the officer reaches the maximum age in grade.

"d. A signed copy of action taken under paragraph 4c above will be forwarded to The Adjutant General, Attention: AGPO-S-C.

"5b. An officer with less than one year to serve in his category before arrival overseas will not be given an overseas assignment. When the rotation policy requires that such an individual be selected for overseas assignment, he will be given an opportunity to apply for a new category. Officers who do not desire to apply for a new category during the prescribed time limits will be required to sign a statement in duplicate in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 5b.

"d. An officer with less than 6 months to serve in his category who is not eligible for renewal of category or who does not desire to apply for a new category (par 5b) will not be reported for reassignment prior to return from overseas, but will be returned to the ZI upon completion of his overseas tour, for separation. However, overseas commanders and commanding generals of military missions may approve applications to extend overseas tours of such officers to retain them until expiration of categories.

"e. An officer serving in an overseas command who will have more than eight months to serve in his category upon departure from the overseas commands but will have less than six months upon reporting for duty at his assigned station in the ZI will apply for a new category or sign a statement in accordance with par 5b prior to his departure from the overseas command. Application will be processed as outlined in paragraph 6.

"13. Enlistment in Grade E-7. The opportunity for each officer who was on active duty on 22 March 1948 to enlist in Grade E-7 is extended. If this extension is at any time terminated, all officers affected will be protected until the expiration of the category in which they are then serving or until separation prior to its expiration under other provisions of regulations. Such officers may enlist in Grade E-7 upon relief from active duty under honorable conditions upon expiration of category or prior to expiration of category, provided such enlistment occurs the day following separation. Under the provisions of Public Law 350, 80th Congress (WD Bul 19, 1947), accrued leave will be carried over into enlisted status and will not be liquidated by lump sum payment. An officer who received lump sum payment for accrued leave upon separation will not be enlisted in Grade E-7. This does not affect the eligibility of an officer who holds a permanent warrant in Grade E-7 to return to that pay grade within six months of separation under the National Defense Act."

ALLISON TURBO-PROP ENGINES POWER NAVY'S GIANT PATROL BOAT TO AN AMERICAN "FIRST"

EQUIPPED with four new Allison T40 Turbo-Prop engines, the Navy's 60-ton XP5Y Convair flying boat chalked up an American first in its maiden flight from the harbor base of the Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corporation at San Diego, California.

This long-range anti-submarine patrol seaplane is the first American aircraft to fly solely with Turbo-Prop power.

With a total weight of only 10,000 pounds and developing a spectacular 22,000 horsepower, the four Allison twin-turbine engines establish a world's record in a horsepower-to-engine-weight ratio — 2.2 horsepower for each pound of engine.

The power from one of these T40 Turbo-Props is greater than the total power of all four reciprocating-type engines in a B-17 Flying Fortress, with only a fraction of the piston-type engine weight.

This first flight of the Convair clearly demonstrates revolutionary design advantages, through the use of Allison Turbo-Prop engines, now applicable to all military transport, cargo and commercial aircraft in the high-power field.

SecNav Anniversary

Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews, who was sworn into office on 24 May 1949, will complete his first year as Secretary next week.

Appointed to the Cabinet post at an inauspicious time—immediately following the cancellation of the Navy's super-carrier and the heated resignation of his predecessor, John L. Sullivan—Mr. Matthews was the center of a storm of controversy and criticism during his initial months in office.

New to the Naval service, he frankly admitted in his first official address to the Midshipmen at Annapolis that he had "little prior training or preparation" to guide him. He told the future Naval officers that he intended, however, to bring to his new job the same determination and loyalty to the Navy that the country expects of them.

Mr. Matthews has undergone a marked transition during his twelve months as the Navy Secretary. At first, no doubt feeling out the general unrest in the Navy Department, he reflected the attitude of tension and insecurity then rampant. His relations with the flag officers in top jobs, and with the press, were on a precarious footing.

With grim determination, Mr. Matthews weathered the trying days following his appointment, and the subsequent difficulties which arose out of the Navy-inspired B-36 document; the charges leveled at the Defense structure by Capt. John Crommelin; the dismissal of Admiral Louis E. Denfeld as Chief of Naval Operations; and the overall retrenchment within the Defense Department. The rapidity with which he gained the knowledge he had indicated he lacked was evident in the increasing assurance with which he tackled each of the problems confronting him.

During recent months, since the appointment of Admiral Forrest P. Sherman as Chief of Naval Operations, the Secretary has instituted numerous changes in the Naval establishment to assure the Navy of what he has termed "a full membership in the Unified Defense Team."

U. S. NAVY & MARINE CORPS

Among the more important developments was the creation of a Shore Establishment Survey Board, ordered by Secretary Matthews to conduct inspections of all Naval districts and determine where cuts could be effected in order to transfer men or funds to areas of higher priority. At the conclusion of the board's report, and with the implementation of their recommendations, the Secretary then established a second board to make a similar survey within the Naval establishment proper.

In addition, the Inspector General's office was enlarged "in order to effect all possible economies in the expenditure of manpower and funds." The Navy's afloat training program for Reservists was reorganized to provide an additional 10,000 training billets and, at the same time, to save approximately $2,000,000 annually in vessel maintenance, upkeep and dock charges. Captain Crommelin was furloughed to inactive duty. Morale and good order were gradually restored.

With his eye on the Navy's primary role, as designated at Key West, Secretary Matthews created a special under-seas warfare office, appointed a capable, high-ranking officer to supervise its work, and reemphasized the growing importance of submarine and anti-submarine warfare.

During his term of office, Naval district boundaries have been changed to coincide with those of the Army and Air Force. Vessels have been added to the depleted Pacific Fleet to strengthen U. S. commitments in the Pacific.

Although cuts were effected in the Naval and Marine Corps air arms, both were held to as high a level as possible with the decreased funds available. The Marine Corps, with the approval of Mr. Matthews and Defense Secretary Johnson, was able to retain two combat battalions and four aircraft squadrons above the cutback level.

The attitude of cooperation with which Mr. Matthews has undertaken the promulgation of Navy policy is apparent in his recent semi-annual report. In listing the revised policies which he has approved, he indicated that his decisions had evolved only after consultation with the Chief of Naval Operations and after full and careful consideration of all factors and the probable level of budgetary support.

Recently, denying reports that he was to accept an appointment as United States Ambassador to Eire, Mr. Matthews made a statement which is characteristic of him. He said, "I thoroughly enjoy my work as Secretary of the Navy and like the people with whom I am associated here." Stating that there was "definitely a job to be done," he said, "I expect to stay here until the job is completed and as long as the President wants me."

Last week the Navy Secretary's achievements were recognized when he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal by the American Legion.

'Backbone of the Navy'

Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, USN, Chief of Naval Operations, has reiterated to a Congressional committee his contention that the carrier task force "is the core of our offensive power."

Asked during recent House Armed Services Committee hearings "What do you consider now the backbone of the American Navy?", Admiral Sherman replied:

"The American Navy is, I believe, now a pretty well-balanced organization, but in the conduct of operations at sea, even though it may not get into a fight day by day, there must always be an element of offensive power."

"In the days of sail, that was the ships of the line. In World War I, it was the battle fleet. In World War II, it was the heavy carrier task force. And in the year 1950, the cover under which we can carry on anti-submarine operations with small ships is the carrier task force. It is the core of our offensive power and it is the element which prevents any other concentrated unit from interrupting our routine operations."

Marines Ready to Go

The Marine Corps has 30,000 officers and men who are ready to go into combat "immediately," General Clifton B. Cates declared this week.

"Our Fleet Marine Forces are ready to move literally anytime, anywhere, by any means," the Marine Corps Commandant said in a "Time for Defense" broadcast over ABC on 16 May. "They are now assembled under one command and they have their supplies with them... boxed, crated, marked and segregated for loading."

The Commandant also confirmed reports that the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Defense Secretary Johnson have approved 16 combat squadrons of Marine aviation "instead of the original 12 for fiscal year 1951." He also pointed out that the formation of "more combat units than had originally been authorized for the next year" was made possible "by the most rigid economy and by a determined policy of shifting Marines from supporting and administrative tasks to combat organizations."

General Cates said that amphibious attack has not been made obsolete by the atomic bomb, but that "it will undoubtedly change the manner in which these attacks are made." The Marine Corps is "working on a great many ideas," he said, and "the one that holds the greatest promise... is the use of transport helicopters for moving the landing force from the ships to the shore." This may not be "the" answer, General Cates said, but added that he mentioned it "to show that we are not resting on our oars."

Discussing the Defense Team, the Commandant said, "It's a good team and it's getting better. The member of the team I know best, the Marine Corps, is ready to do its part—to carry its full share of the load."

U. S. AIR FORCE

Warrant Officers Action

Air Force officials indicated this week that an announcement may be made shortly regarding action taken by the board to place warrant officers within the four pay grades provided in the Career Compensation Act.

This board, as reported previously, adjourned many weeks ago, but delay of its action resulted from the necessity for Department of Defense studies of the effects of the action. Also, the Air Force has said it was dissatisfied with the severe limitations imposed upon the number who could be placed in the top W-4 pay status.

Whether the forthcoming announcement will give the names of all warrant officers in the four pay grades, or just those in the top two brackets was uncertain late this week.

Wives to Far East

The Air Force disclosed this week that provisions now in effect within the Far East Air Force make it possible for military personnel to obtain coordinated travel of their dependents, provided the following requirements are met:

1. Wife is sole dependent and sponsor agrees to accept occupancy of bachelor type quarters deemed suitable for joint occupancy by overseas commander.

2. Coordinated travel of the principal and dependents may be authorized in individual cases at discretion of major subordinate commanders when dependents are invited by principal occupant of a dependent housing unit, within the theater, to live in his assigned quarters as a house guest until such time as dependent housing becomes available to the house guest under the priority system.

Upon receipt of overseas PCS orders, individuals who meet the requirements above are required to make application to appropriate overseas commands for coordinated travel.

14th AF Assn.

The 14th Air Force Association will hold its annual convention 1, 2, and 3 July in the Mayflower Hotel, Washington, D. C.

As usual, an authentic native-style Chinese banquet will be a convention highlight. Reservations should be made by direct communication with the Mayflower Hotel. Membership is open to all who served in an assigned or attached status overseas with either the 14th Air Force, the China Air Task Force, or AVG. Dues are $2.50 annually payable to: Harold Frazer, Secretary-Treasurer, 175 Market Street, Paterson, N. J.

French Submit to GI Haircut

Representatives of the first North Atlantic Pact member nation to train at Randolph AFB, Tex., 75 French cadets are now undergoing flight instruction.

Upon their arrival at the Texas base, one minor difficulty developed. The GI haircut, to which all cadets must submit, proved a temporary problem. In France, such a haircut is considered degrading by Armed Forces personnel. However, following diplomatic explanation by American instructors, an "international incident" over the cadet coiffures was averted.

Name Ladd AFB Barracks

The first of two 500-man barracks for airmen at Ladd AFB, Alaska, has been named in honor of the late Sgt. Richard L. Haynes, who was killed in an aircraft accident last September. Haynes Hall was finished late last year, with the second barracks scheduled for completion next month.

Seek More Top Rank

to the fundamental principles of effective management and is not in the best interests of the service.

"There are five positions within the Air Force for which there exists the highest priority requirement for top-ranking general officers, and which, in the interests of national security, should be filled by 4-star general officers. In addition to the position occupied by the Chief of Staff, those positions are the following: Vice Chief of Staff; Commanding General, Strategic Air Command; Commanding General, Continental Air Command; and Commanding General, Air Materiel Command. The position of the Vice Chief of Staff has previously been designated by the President as requiring the grade of 4-star general, and as you know was recently vacated through the tragic loss of General Fairchild. The Commanding General, Air Materiel Command has likewise been previously designated by the President as a position requiring the grade of 4-star general and was redesignated as a 3-star position because of General McNarney's reassignment to OSD. At the present time the Commanding General of the Air Materiel Command, which is responsible for providing the entire logistics support of the Air Force and which controls resources of 12 billion dollars, is a lieutenant general.

"Our major combat commands, the Strategic Air Command and the Continental Air Command, are presently commanded by lieutenant generals. These commands, each of which comprises a total strength in excess of 60,000, are responsible, respectively, for providing for prompt retaliatory air attacks and the air defense of our nation—missions of grave and critical concern to our entire population and to our allies. The increased critical importance of our strategic striking force and our continental air defense fully warrant the assignment of 4-star general officers to these positions.

"We have other commands comprising total strengths in excess of 60,000, such as the Air Training Command and the Military Air Transport Service, presently commanded by major generals, which merit higher rank. The Industrial College of the Armed Forces, co-equal with the National War College and the Armed Forces Staff College, is commanded by an Air Force major general, whereas the commandant of the other two schools are of 3-star general or flag rank. Similarly, an Air Force major general is presently serving as Director of Staff of the Munitions Board, a position formerly filled by an Army Lieutenant General.

"The Air Force must accept its full share in furnishing officers to fill key positions in the National Defense Establishment, as well as positions established pursuant to joint commitments. For example, from our present limited resources of 4- and 3-star generals, General McNarney is serving on the Staff of the Secretary of Defense; Lieutenant General Harmon is serving on the Military Staff Committee of the United Nations; Lieutenant General Quesada is assigned to command of the Joint Task Force-3. All three of the officers are detached from the Air Force command organization for an indefinite period. Additionally, Lieutenant General Norstad has been detached for a period of several months as the commander of Joint Operation 'Swarm.'

"Presently there are two Lieutenant Generals, Twining and Cannon, who are completing their foreign service tours in Alaska and Europe respectively and must soon be replaced. As I will show, all other top ranking generals are presently placed in responsible assignments from which their relief to replace Lt. Generals Twining and Cannon would place an undue burden upon the efficient management of the Air Force. Of the eleven other Air Force lieutenant generals, the following facts are pertinent:

"a. Lieutenant General Stratemyer is now overseas commanding Far East Air Forces.

"b. Lieutenant General Whitehead, Commanding General, Continental Air Command, just returned from overseas duty a few months ago.

"c. Lieutenant General Hubert R. Harmon is serving on the Military Staff Committee, United Nations, a position which is set up statutorily as a lieutenant general position.

"d. Lieutenant General Quesada is assigned to command the Joint Task Force-3 for the next atomic test and will be absent from the command structure for some time.

"e. Lieutenant General Chidlaw, Commanding General, Air Materiel Command, and Lieutenant General Wolfe, Deputy Chief of Staff, Materiel, Headquarters, United States Air Force, are in positions which require their specialized training and experience.

"f. Lieutenant General Rawlings is a trained Comptroller and must, in the interests of the Air Force, remain on that duty for the next two or three years.

"g. Lieutenant General LeMay, Commanding General, Strategic Air Command, a specialist in Strategic Air Command, a specialist in Strategic Air experience, has been in place only about one year, having returned from overseas at that time.

"h. Lieutenant General Craig has been back from Alaska just over two years and has just recently been assigned as Inspector General. He cannot justifiably be sent back overseas again so soon.

"i. The two remaining Lieutenant Generals, Edwards and Norstad, are key officers on General Vandenberg's Staff. General Norstad as previously mentioned has been on detached service from Headquarters USAF as Commander, Operation 'Swarm' and on 22 May becomes the Acting Vice Chief of Staff. I have been acting as the Deputy Chief of Staff Operations, during his absence. The Acting Deputy Chief of Staff, Personnel, is now a major general.

"This lack of lieutenant generals, particularly at comparable levels in the Air Staff creates a most undesirable situation. It is apparent that General Vandenberg has little or no flexibility in the assignment or reassignment of his lieutenant generals. Under the current limitations on 3- and 4-star general officers, General Vandenberg is thus forced either to break up his staff or to assign specialists who should remain on current duties in order to replace either Lieutenant General Twining or Lieutenant General Cannon. I am sure you understand that a similar disruption will be caused by overseas rotation every two or three years unless an increase in the number of generals and lieutenant generals is obtained.

"Recently General Vandenberg received a request from the Secretary of Defense to promote the Director of the Staff, Munitions Board, to lieutenant general. He had no other alternative but to advise the Secretary of Defense that under current limitations of 3- and 4-star general officers, this could not be done. I might also add that the charter approved for the Director of the Staff, Munitions Board, calls for a lieutenant general and that the previous Director of the Staff, Munitions Board, who was a member of the Department of the Army, was a lieutenant general.

"To summarize, the following are the positions which are the planned distribution of increased authorization of the twenty-seven general and lieutenant general positions:

4-Star Positions

Chief of Staff, US Air Force
Vice Chief of Staff, US Air Force
CG, Strategic Air Command
CG, Continental Air Command

Commandant of one of the joint colleges (Armed Forces Staff College; National War College; Industrial College of the Armed Forces)

Director of the Staff of one of the Department of Defense Boards (Munitions Board; Personnel Policy Board; or Research and Development Board)

"This planned utilization is based upon the existing command structure of the Air Force and requirements of a joint nature. I am sure you will appreciate that it will require some period of time to achieve this planned distribution and that it is subject to change as the factors influencing the requirements change. The final designation of the positions will, of course, be made by the President.

"The Budget implications of this legislation are nominal, involving only an additional annual expenditure of approximately $7,000."

Air-Army Functions

random to Maj. Gen. Robert M. Lee of the Tactical Air Command which re-stated the Army's need for more joint airborne troop carrier training and close air support.

Under provisions of new Air Force reorganization plans, the Tactical Air Force, commanded by Brig. Gen. W. R. Wolfenbarger, USAF, one of General Norstad's most important deputies in the recent Swarmer operation, is to be given full control over two fighter-bomber and three troop-carrier groups.

The Tactical Air Force, created on a provisional basis about a year ago, is to be given permanent status and the size of its headquarters staff at Pope AFB, N. C., adjacent to Ft. Bragg, N. C., home of the Army's crack 82d Airborne Division, is to be increased considerably.

Further, the new program calls for more Army-Air Force maneuvers in various parts of the Nation, rather than the concentration on one major operation, such as Swarmer, which requires much travel time for units moving to and from the maneuver area.

In the past, General Wolfenbarger's organization has had air groups assigned to it only for maneuvers. Now, two groups of F-84 jet fighter bombers and three groups of troop carriers are to be permanently assigned for direct year-around work with Army units.

Additionally, it was reported that another group of jet fighters will be under the Tactical Air Force about half the time, although their primary mission will continue to be air defense.

Although the Air Force made no official announcement, it is indicated that the 20th Fighter Group at Shaw AFB, SC, and the 31st Fighter Group at Turner AFB, Ga., are to be assigned permanently to the Tactical Air Force. The 27th Fighter Group, Bergstrom AFB, Tex., will be the part-time unit, according to reports this week.

The three troop-carrier groups which are to be placed under the Tactical Air Force have been identified unofficially as the 62d at McChord AFB, Wash.; and the 314th and 316th, based at Stewart AFB, Tenn.

The Air Force shifts, it is anticipated, will result in an early announcement pertaining to reorganization of the Continental Air Command, which two years ago was given operational control of combat units of the Tactical Air Command. The likelihood is that these combat units will be given actual full-time control of the units assigned to its Tactical Air Force.

The Gridiron Dinner

All the top civilian and military leaders of the Armed Forces were present at the Spring Dinner of the Gridiron Club in Washington, D. C., 13 May, when official Washington saw the organization of distinguished newspapermen lampoon the men and events that make the news.

Special honor was paid by the Club to M. Sgt. Clayton Lindsay, member of the U. S. Marine Band, when it was announced that the event marked the 30th year in which he had played at the Club's functions. Sergeant Lindsay will be retired from the Marine Corps in July.

The dinner saw the induction of Mr. Thomas L. Stokes of United Features Syndicate as President, and Mr. James T. Berryman, Pulitzer prize winning cartoonist, as vice president.

The Service group, headed by Secretary of Defense Johnson, included Secretary of the Army Pace, Secretary of the Navy Matthews, Secretary of the Air Force Finletter, General Omar N. Bradley, General J. Lawton Collins, Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, and General Clifton B. Cates.

Other Service personnel at the dinner included:

OUR PRIORITY LIST

1. Early construction of adequate Government quarters for commissioned and enlisted personnel at all permanent stations, supplemented by satisfactory legislation to encourage private building of dwelling units near Service establishments.
2. Improved retirement pay for wounded and disabled personnel.
3. Continuance and extension of medical and dental care for families of Service personnel; provision for education at Government expense of children of Service personnel on duty at stations where suitable free schools are not available; and survivor benefits for dependents.
4. Restoration of military exemptions from Federal income tax, broadened to include all retired pay from taxation.
5. Early attainment and continued maintenance of a fully-manned 70-group Air Force.
6. Prompt construction of a radar fence and air warning net to cover all avenues of hostile air approach.
7. Rapid expansion of our submarine fleet and accelerated development of anti-submarine vessels and equipment, with continued experimentation and construction of new Naval types.
8. Organization and training of a balanced Mobile Ground Force, including air-borne and amphibious troops, of sufficient strength and ready, with complete and modern equipment, for immediate action in an emergency.
9. Development and improvement of the organization and training of the National Guard, Organized Reserves and other civilian components of the Armed Forces, with appropriate training facilities, and restoration of inactive training pay for all elements.
10. Continued scientific research and development in all new and unconventional devices and methods of warfare backed by industry and labor kept constantly ready and trained through production and educational orders.
11. Close supervision and constant scrutiny of Service promotion and elimination policies and procedures, to insure the prevention or prompt correction of injustices and inequities.

MORALE of Service personnel will scarcely be improved by the action of the House Rules Committee in forcing the elimination from the Public Works Bill of all authorizations for government constructed family housing at military posts in the United States. The bill had been passed by the Senate and reported originally by the House Armed Services Committee with some U. S. housing included in it. However, the powerful Rules Committee declined to approve it in that form, giving the Armed Services Committee the alternative of ditching the family housing or facing defeat of the entire construction program. Throwing the housing overboard saves about $108 million leaving a net authorization of $507 million. The bill does retain the authorizations for desperately needed quarters in Alaska and at overseas stations. Those opposing government constructed housing in the United States contend that the Wherry Act, by mortgage guarantees to private builders, can supply enough living facilities. However, the shortage is so great that both means should be used. Moreover, failure to build government quarters would make military installations completely dependent upon private owners who could at any time decide to put their property to other uses. Should the House pass the bill in its present form, we urge the Senate conferees to insist upon the inclusion of these important items.

AS a result of the outstanding success of Exercise Swarmer, recently concluded in North Carolina, airborne training will be greatly expanded. The Military Air Transport Service has announced that its primary responsibility henceforth will be to train an airlift force that can be readily expanded to meet mobilization requirements. The Tactical Air Force will be placed in control of three troop carrier groups and two fighter-bomber groups. Furthermore, the new program will include more frequent Army-Air Force maneuvers in different sections of the country. This program will go far toward remedying past deficiencies due to lack of sufficient air transport and of adequate coordinated training of the ground and air arms. Every effort will be made by the Army and the Air Force to apply the lessons learned in the maneuvers and to accelerate the development of materiel and techniques, specially conceived to insure success of airborne operations. In Exercise Swarmer close attention was devoted to logistical air support of ground troops. Thousands of men were transported and completely supplied by air. While errors were made in calculation and execution the results as a whole were particularly gratifying and indicated great progress. Most observers agreed with General J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, who characterized the operation as the biggest step forward since World War II. Supplies and armament, including fully-loaded 2½ ton trucks, 105 mm howitzers, and engineer maintenance equipment, were delivered to forward areas with speed and precision. The test revealed the need for more compact equipment and greater staff coordination. It also disclosed the areas in which development of materiel and improved training of ground and air troops promised the best results. Recognition of the tremendously increased importance of airborne operations in any conflict of the foreseeable future should materially add to our National Security.

THE country will observe next Monday, 22 May, as National Maritime Day. It is the 131st anniversary of the successful completion in 1819 of the historic trans-Atlantic voyage of the S.S. Savannah, the American merchantman which was the first steam-propelled vessel to cross the ocean. The occasion serves not only to recall the revolutionary application of steam to ocean transportation, but also to emphasize the contributions made by the American Merchant Marine to the progress and success of our country in peace and war. The observance of National Maritime Day so soon after Armed Forces Day is particularly appropriate, because of the close association of our Merchant Marine with National Security. American flag vessels carried millions of our troops and vast quantities of supplies across the Atlantic and Pacific during World War II. In the future, as in the past, our Merchant Marine will constitute an element of vital support to our National Military Establishment. Success in any major conflict of the future will necessitate the close co-ordination of our Armed Forces with all forms of transportation—air, rail, highway, inland waterway and ocean—in order to assure rapid movement of troops and supplies, and to keep the wheels of industry turning. The integration of these vital communications elements is essential not only to the peaceful development and expansion of commerce and industry, but also to the security of the country. To the great American Merchant Marine, members of the Armed Services and their supporters extend on National Maritime Day their warm felicitations.

Letters expressing individual views and intended for publication should be accompanied by the name and address of the writer, not necessarily for publication, but as evidence of good faith. Retired Pay

Editor THE JOURNAL:

Anent your invitation to comment on the effect of executive orders in administering the Career Compensation Act, here goes:

Retired officers disabled to the extent of 60 per cent and with 22 years of service get about $9 less a month than authorized by past laws and so on down the line! The only retired people who get a raise in pay are those with over 75 per cent disabilities, or who have sufficient service and disabling factors to bring out a pension higher than they are now receiving.

The whole thing is obvious! The retired people have been sold down the river, so as not to jeopardize the increases in pay of those remaining on active duty. It is a palpable fraud and class legislation! By basic contract and sustaining laws for decades, the disabled retired were entitled to 75 per cent of the pay of their grade then, and if subsequently increased. Today that honorable contract is a scrap of paper!

R. F. L.,
Lt. Col., USA-Ret.

Credit for ROTC

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

No consideration should be given to paying longevity for Cadet service without considering the thousands of ROTC honor graduates and integrated regulars who graduated from college at their own expense. This proposal should be amended to include ROTC cadets who completed 8 semesters of ROTC training and who graduated from college and were integrated into the Regular Army on their wartime records or who were honor graduates and came directly into the Regular Army.

Captain, USA

Nat. Guard Service

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

In the article in your issue concerning pay credits for Academy service you have apparently overlooked a type of service for which credit was formerly given, but which is now denied by Public Law 351, Career Compensation Act. This is credit formerly granted for service in the National Guard or Organized Militia prior to 1 July 1916. Credit for this service was provided for by Public Law 421, 78th Congress, approved 7 Sept. 1944. The provisions of this law are copied verbatim in Sec. 202, (a), (2), which gives credit for this service to officers and enlisted men on active duty, but a proviso in subparagraph (b) states that this type of service "shall not be included to increase retired pay." And Sec. 511 restricts service pay credit to "active service."

So, you see, credit for service in the National Guard or Organized Militia prior to 1 July 1916 is effectually denied to retired officers and enlisted men. This service was performed at a great sacrifice of time and money. No one begrudges credit for services in the academies, and we hope they get it, but we feel that service in the National Guard is entitled to the same credit.

In discussing the subject with the press, the President indicated that he thought the Military Academy could follow the general lines laid down for the Naval Academy in the development of Aviation.

The most strenuous want of the present on this station is a coaling station under government control.

85 Years Ago

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Multiple Investigations—The sixth separate investigation of the Army's Finance Center at St. Louis, Mo., was undertaken this week when a House Armed Services subcommittee began hearings in Washington. Previous inquiries have been conducted by the Civil Service Commission, General Accounting Office, FBI, a House Civil Service subcommittee, and the Army Inspector General who utilized "the largest inspection team ever assembled" on a single case.

Two major issues are under study. One concerns the overpayment of about $157,000,000 in allotments and family allowances to dependents. The other pertains to activities of alleged subversives at the Center.

This week, Assistant Secretary of the Army Karl Bendetsen told the Armed Services subcommittee substantially what had been stated last week by Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, Army Chief of Information, concerning the overpayments. Assistant Secretary Bendetsen said the "get 'em paid" pressure of wartime and demobilization days was responsible for most of the overpayments. It is recalled that Congress instructed the Army to do everything possible to expedite these payments in order to prevent hardships. Customary audits were eliminated in accordance with Congressional desires.

Mr. Bendetsen noted that over $19,000,000,000 was paid out during a period of seven and one-half years and reported that approximately $83,000,000 of the overpayments has been recovered, with other millions accounted for by referrals to the Government Accounting Office for collection, or by waivers through statutory authority. Only about $35,000,000—less than one-fifth of one per cent of the total disbursements remains to be recovered or adjusted, the Army Assistant Secretary reported.

With regard to the security phase of the investigations, he said the installation is an administrative agency "which is non-sensitive in nature and does not have strategically important information." He told the subcommittee that investigation of 63 employees led to nine removals, four resignations, and 25 other separations, resignations or transfers. Of the remaining 25 presently employed, all but two have been cleared officially.

Mr. Bendetsen emphasized that no investigation has developed evidence of fraud. He said a final, complete Army report on the entire matter of the Finance Center is to be expected in the near future.

Navy Atom Bomb Squadrons?—Reports that the Navy has secretly developed two air squadrons with a primary mission of carrying the atomic bomb cropped up in the news this week, but the Navy refused to confirm the story. Neither was it denied. The commanding officers of the two "atom squadrons" were reportedly Capt. John Hayward, at one time assigned to the Manhattan (Atomic Bomb) Project, and Capt. Fred Ashworth, "bomb commander" aboard the plane that dropped the atomic bomb on Nagasaki. The only information released by the Navy was that Captain Hayward is now commanding Composite Squadron Number Five at Moffett Field, Calif., and that Captain Ashworth is the commanding officer of a similar unit, Composite Squadron Number 6, at San Francisco.

Permanent AF Appointments—The Air Force Personnel Policy Council is still in session considering the names of approximately 4000 Reserve officers for permanent appointments in the Regular Air Force. Although it was announced originally that about 300 appointments were to be made, latest indications are that actually only about 200 Regular commissions will be awarded this Spring, with other officers to be placed on a deferred list.

Air Transport Prototypes—Military airmen and civilian aircraft authorities are hoping that the long-standing bottleneck in the development of prototype transport aircraft will be broken during the present session of Congress. The need for a firm decision on this matter, which is handicapping aeronautical development in this country while England and Canada speed ahead with production of advanced transport aircraft, was emphasized in a recent address by Maj. Gen. Laurence Kuter, commanding general of the Military Air Transport Service. He stressed that until a decision is reached as to the degree of government participation in the prototype program, progress will be thwarted.

Presently under consideration by the Senate Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce are no less than six separate bills pertaining to the development of improved transport aircraft. Main attention has been focused on S. 3504, which provides Federal assistance in defraying expenditures for testing prototypes, including passenger, cargo and feeder airplanes.

Executive Vice President Robert Ramspeck of the Air Transport Association told the Congressional group that "while the bill probably does not provide a complete solution" since manufacturers would be required to develop the planes at the expense of millions of dollars, the legislation should be passed "in order that some progress can be made immediately."

Similarly, Admiral DeWitt C. Ramsey, USN-Ret, president of the Aircraft Industries Association, declared that despite the fact that "we should not hold any extravagant hopes for the accomplishments of S. 3504," the bill "will be of great assistance in hastening the conversion of piston engine transport aircraft into airplanes with turbine propellers. Such conversions," said Admiral Ramsey, "will enable the further improvement of our post-war transports permitting substantial increases in speeds and load-carrying performances."

Admiral Ramsey explained that S. 3504 will also, by financing the operation of jet-powered craft on dummy routes, provide designers with badly needed information about many jet operating problems.

He emphasized, however, that the challenge from foreign competition, such as England, "can be met fully only by a comprehensive prototype procurement program."

Army Chaplains—Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Matthew H. Imrie, who served with the Headquarters of the Chief of Staff during the recent Portrex Exercise, has been commended for his work by Lt. Gen. LeRoy P. Hunt, USMC. In his letter of commendation General Hunt declared: "The Chief of Staff wishes to express his sincere appreciation of the services of Lt. Col. Imrie, whose professional ability, cooperation, industry and application contributed immeasurably to the successful completion of the mission of the Chief of Staff Headquarters. His performance of duty was considered outstanding."

Military Strength Deficit—The numerical strength of the Army Forces on 30 April was approximately 40,500 below the proposed budget strength for the 1951 fiscal year beginning on 1 July, official statistics showed this week. The Army on 30 April had a strength of 599,400, compared with the 630,000 men for whom funds are asked in the next fiscal year. The Navy strength on 30 April was 381,300 and the Marine Corps had 75,700 officers and men, with the 1951 budget calling for 461,000. The Air Force strength was 410,000, or 5900 less than the anticipated 1951 total.

Declassify Atom-Bomb Studies—The Army has announced the downgrading of security classification from "Secret" to "Unclassified" of USSBS Report 92 on "Effects of the Atomic Bomb on Hiroshima, Japan, Volumes I, II, and III, 1947," and a similar report on Nagasaki.

Hostile Artillery Detection—Concerned because there is at present no United States or known foreign equipment capable of meeting adequately the need for a device to locate hostile artillery, the Army plans during the forthcoming fiscal year to spend about $2,500,000 for development of a detector. A Congressional committee has been told that "due to the small size, high speed and flat trajectory of artillery shells the problem is one of extreme complexity and will be difficult to solve. In view of the known characteristics of certain artillery and the doctrine of mass artillery fire, it is essential that some type of equipment be developed so that enemy guns may be located and destroyed."

"Authorized and Directed"—In view of the recent Congressional dispute concerning withholding of appropriated funds, it is significant to note that Representative Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), in sponsoring authorization legislation for 50,000 tons of shipbuilding, stipulated that the President is hereby "authorized and directed" to undertake the construction. Asked by a member of the House Armed Services Committee if passage of the bill "will place these vessels in the same category as the carrier United States," Chairman Vinson replied:

"You observe in this language that we use the words, 'It is hereby authorized and directed.' I don't know whether that word 'directed' means any more than 'authorized' but at least it shows the frame of mind by using that expression."

Nat. Guard Retirement Pay—Brig. Gen. George McL. Presson, who as an officer of the Maine National Guard continuously served from 1901 to 1928, has recently filed suit in the U. S. Court of Claims, through the law firm of Ansell and Ansell of Washington, D. C., for recovery of National Guard retirement pay as authorized by Title III of the Army and Air Force Vitalization and Retirement Equalization Act of 1948. That Act authorizes retirement of persons who have attained the age of 60 and have performed not less than 20 years of satisfactory Federal service in the Army of the United States, and its components, including "the federally recognized National Guard prior to 1933." The Army Department denied General Presson's application for retirement with pay on the ground that the National Guard was first federally recognized by the National Defense Act of 3 June, 1916, and that, therefore, his National Guard service prior to the enactment of that Act could not count as Federal service. The plaintiff contends in his action that the Army Department's rejection of his application disregards the Dick Act of 21 Jan., 1903, which he says was not only the first Act that federally recognized, it was the first Act that actually created, the National Guard as an element of the national defense forces, and that all subsequent Acts of Congress pertaining to the National Guard, including the first National Defense Act, only continued, confirmed, and further emphasized the federal relationship that the Dick Act established.

Cut JIC Reports—The Chairman of the Department of Defense Management Committee has declared that JIC Reports must be eliminated as part of the overall economy drive. General Joseph T. McNarney, USAF, relates that the Armed Forces have been spending millions of dollars annually for "Just in Case" Reports—"for which there is no firm need but which, it is felt, 'it might be nice to have.'"

He says that money can be saved by elimination of formal typed memoranda wherever possible. General McNarney maintains that a pencilled note "with perhaps a carbon copy for record not only does the job quicker but saves money as well."

His views are included in an article called, "Economy Makes Sense," published in a current Army publication.

Captain Crommelin May Be Admiral—Capt. John G. Crommelin has requested retirement from the Naval service on 1 June, and, although the Navy says "final determination has not yet been made by the Secretary of the Navy," it is expected that the request will be approved. The Defense Department critic, furloughed to half pay last April, would probably be promoted on the retired list to the rank of Rear Admiral, by virtue of combat decorations received during World War II.

Captain Crommelin announced his retirement request on 13 May, stating, "As a required followup to my official candidacy for the United States Senate from Alabama, I have submitted my official request for retirement from the United States Navy after almost 31 years of naval service, including four as a midshipman. I have requested to be placed on the Navy's retired list as of 1 June, 1950. This will give me five months in which to campaign actively before the November election."

He said, "I am now on enforced furlough and denied the privilege of service in the armed forces. Retirement provides the means to serve my country best in these critical times."

Chaplains' Memorial—The Military Chaplains Association has approved plans for a $10,000,000 memorial to be erected in Washington, D. C., which would include four buildings—a chapel each for the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish faiths and space in the fourth building for activities of the organization. The names of all military chaplains, past and present, living and dead, will be inscribed in the memorial.

At the annual meeting of the Chaplains Association, there was no discussion regarding financing of the project, construction of which was proposed by Comdr. Joshua Goldberg, ChC, USN.

Operation Midnight Oil—The Air Force has published Regulation No. 34-29 on "Operation Midnight Oil," establishing an organized plan of study for airmen who desire to improve their qualifications in any of the career fields. Specific suggested courses of study for each career field are listed in separately published attachments to AFR 35-405.

Army JAGC—The Army has published AR 10-255 describing the organization and functions of the Judge Advocate General's Corps. Superseded is AR 25-15, 13 Feb. 1947.

Foreign Affairs—Foreign ministers of the twelve Atlantic Pact nations meeting in London this week authorized the creation of a top-level council of deputies to meet continuously in London to coordinate the economic and military programs of the member nations, insofar as they relate to preparation for joint defense against aggression.

Each of the member nations will appoint a deputy to serve on the council, which will choose one of its members as chairman. It is understood that the American member will be elected chairman. The post will be a full-time assignment and will be one of great importance and influence. It is expected that the position will go to a civilian. Prominently mentioned in this connection is Mr. Robert A. Lovett, former Assistant Secretary of War and Under Secretary of State.

General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower is also mentioned for this post, with emphasis on the fact that this would be a full-time civilian assignment, not a designation as overall commander, for which he had also been suggested. Among others included in speculation of observers for chairmanship of the proposed committee are Ambassadors W. Averill Harriman and Lewis W. Douglas, and former Senator John Foster Dulles, presently foreign affairs consultant of the State Department.

The permanent goal of the new council will be to develop a plan to create a balanced defense force for the western allies. Member nations will each specialize in various fields of defense activities. These will be coordinated in an overall defense program. Thus the European continental countries might be expected to emphasize the development of a powerful, integrated ground force, based largely on a strong French Army. England might be called upon to develop a strong anti-submarine Naval force and many squadrons of fast fighter aircraft. The United States, under such a program, might provide most of the capital Naval vessels and the long-range, heavy bombardment groups.

Under the decision of the foreign ministers the new council will coordinate defense plans, recommend needed steps to be taken by the member countries for improvement of the general defense, exchange views on political matters, promote and coordinate public information, and consider further steps to expand cooperation on social, economic and defense matters.

It seems probable that a decision on a supreme military commander for the Atlantic Pact nations will be deferred for the present at least. There seems to be general agreement that when such a commander is chosen he will be an American, probably either General Eisenhower or General Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The London meeting of the foreign ministers of the twelve Atlantic Pact countries followed an important conference of Secretary of State Dean Acheson, British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin, and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman. At the conclusion of this conference the three statesmen issued a statement, in which they announced that because of the attitude of Russia it was not possible to proceed with negotiations for the conclusion of a German peace treaty.

However, it was stated that it was the aim of the three Allies to make it possible for Germany to re-enter the community of free nations of Western Europe. A study group was set up to determine the extent to which present controls of the occupying powers over Western Germany might be progressively relaxed or modified.

Countering the moves of the western countries, Russia announced that reparations from Eastern Germany had been cut by one-half, leaving a balance for future collection of nearly $3.2 billion to be paid in industrial production over a period of 15 years. Actually the cut means very little, since Eastern Germany has been systematically and thoroughly looted by Russia during the past five years, and only a small part of the spoils has been credited to the reparations account. East Germans have little doubt that any surplus production of their farms and factories will continue to go to the Soviet Union, irrespective of reparations bookkeeping.

Secretary-General Trygve Lie of the United Nations this week had what he described as a satisfactory discussion with Marshal Joseph Stalin on the problems of the cold war. He announced that positive ideas had been exchanged, but that results might not be determined for several months. He declined to reveal the details of the conference.

Subsequently Mr. Lie talked to Wang Chia-hsiang, ambassador to Moscow from Red China. Presumably the discussion dealt largely with the proposal that a Chinese Communist delegation replace the present nationalist representatives to the United Nations, a move that Mr. Lie favors.

This week the Chinese nationalists gave up without a struggle the strategic Chusan islands off the China coast, near Shanghai. This extremely important post was abandoned to the Communists, with some 150,000 troops being evacuated to Formosa. The lost islands had served as nationalist bases, from which air attacks on Shanghai and on shipping to and from that port were launched. This latest military disaster limits the nationalist-held territory to Formosa, which the Reds are expected to invade this summer.

These developments lend special significance to the visit to Japan next month of Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and General Bradley. They will confer with General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, Supreme Commander in Japan, on the state of our defenses in the Far East, and are expected to discuss with him the retention of military bases in Japan in connection with the proposed Japanese peace treaty.

The Russian press has denounced the activities of American oil prospectors along the northern Iranian border. The Soviet contention is that the oilmen are conducting an aerial photographic survey of Russian border defenses, instead of looking for oil. The State Department dismisses the protest as nonsense.

The surprising result of this week's Turkish election was the sweeping defeat of the Republican People's Party after 27 years in power. The new Democrat Party, under the leadership of Celal Bayar, a prominent banker, was carried into office by an avalanche of votes, unprecedented in Turkish history. The election was decided on local issues, and no change in current friendly relations with the United States and other western powers is foreseen.

Vladimir Houdek, Czech delegate to the United Nations, resigned this week and appealed to President Truman for asylum in the United States. Mr. Houdek had faithfully followed the Soviet line in international affairs, but on the eve of his scheduled return to Czechoslovakia he balked, and denounced Russian dominance over his country. Opposition to his continued residence in this country has been voiced by anti-Red Czechs, who insist that the erstwhile diplomat is still a Communist, even though he has broken with the Kremlin.

Rubber for Rivets—Synthetic rubber compounds are being used to replace thousands of rivets on a B-36 bomber being overhauled at Kelly AFB, Tex., according to Col. Fred Bell, Maintenance Chief. The rubber compounds save weight and smooth the skin of the aircraft and are said to be stronger than rivets or spot welding.

National Production Report

Production of goods and services in the United States during the first quarter of 1950 was approximately equal to the record peak attained in the final quarter of 1948, according to a report of the Department of Commerce released this week.

The value of the output was fixed at an annual rate of $263 billion, which is 2.4 per cent below the annual rate of $270 billion achieved in the fourth quarter of 1948. However, it is pointed out by Joseph Meehan, the Commerce Department director of business economics, that since prices are lower the physical volume of production was practically the same as in the closing quarter of 1948.

Furthermore, the report states, the trend of business at the close of the first quarter of this year was upward, and the advance is continuing during the current quarter. Mr. Meehan described the present satisfactory state of business as "a continuation of the boom which has progressed, with one short and moderate interruption (in 1949), since the beginning of 1946."

Merchant Ship Report

The privately-owned U. S. ocean-going merchant fleet declined by four vessels and 31,000 deadweight tons during April, the National Federation of American Shipping reported this week.

The Federation's monthly report on the status of the American Merchant Marine showed the privately-owned fleet composed of 730 dry cargo and combination vessels of 7,338,000 deadweight tons, and 461 tankers of 6,797,000 dwt. The decline of four vessels was ascribed to removal of five vessels due to overage, transferred to Great Lakes operation or removed from documentation, and the addition of one new tanker to the fleet.

Total vessels in the National Defense Reserve Fleet, excluding tugs, cableships and military auxiliaries, increased from 2,186 to 2,198 during April.

Obituaries

Col. Kellogg Plume

Col. Kellogg Plume, Executive Officer at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md, during World War II, died at his winter home in Clearwater, Fla., 6 May. At the time of his death, he was Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Plume & Atwood Mfg. Co., of Watertown, Conn.

Prior to World War I, Colonel Plume served as commander of Co. H, 102d Infantry of the Connecticut National Guard. When the war began, he attended the Officers' Training Camp at Plattsburg, N. Y., graduating with the rank of captain.

Between the two wars, he was active in the U. S. Army Reserve, serving as vice president of the Connecticut Reserve organization. Also, at this time, he became vice president of the Plume & Atwood Co., the firm which was founded by his grandfather. He later became general manager of the brass rolling mill of the Company, until returning to active duty as a Lt. Colonel in 1942. The following year he was promoted to the rank of Colonel, the same year he reached the mandatory retirement age.

Colonel Plume is survived by his widow, Mrs. Pauline B. Parke Plume, of 96 Middlebury Road, Watertown, Conn.; one son, Capt. Stephen K. Plume, Jr., now serving with the Army at Ft. Knox, Ky.; and three grandchildren. Burial was at Watertown, Conn.

Lt. Comdr. William K. Yarnall, USN

Lt. Comdr. William King Yarnall, USN, 35, (USNA '38), died at the U. S. Naval Hospital, Philadelphia, 16 May.

Commander Yarnall was senior gunnery officer of the battleship Oklahoma, and officer-in-charge the morning of 7 Dec 1941, when the ship was sunk at Pearl Harbor. It was he who gave the order to "abandon ship" when it became evident that the Oklahoma was helpless, sinking and unable to defend herself. He and his crew received a citation from President Roosevelt. He later served as commander of the submarine Pollack, one of the first of its type to operate off the Japanese coast.

After the war, he served in China, where he contracted an illness requiring hospitalization since 1948.

Commander Yarnall is survived by his widow, Mrs Donitza Yarnall, and his mother, Mrs. Chandler Yarnall, both of Merchantville, N. J.

of industry are fully utilized, continually refined, and intensely studied for further efficient and economical adaptation to the peculiar needs of the Navy. This Navy Supply System together with other assigned functions of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts has made the United States Navy the best fed, best paid, best clothed and best supplied of the navies of the world.

Naval supply now includes all phases of military distribution, military finance, and supply management. Not only does today's Supply Corps officer secure and deliver the diverse and complicated technical materials to the Operating Forces but he is also skilled in the intricacies of determining naval requirements. He is intimately familiar with the utilization of usage data, inventory control methods, simplified procurement procedures, accounting techniques, and the mechanical business giants which with the trip of a lever can do the work of hundreds of men. Gone with the sailing vessel is the old-time purser who met ship needs as best he could by local trading and barter.

Very recently, the entire Armed Forces has focused great attention on economical and efficient marshaling of combined supply energies. This is as it should be in peacetime; however, there have arisen intricate and complex procedural problems which have presented almost insurmountable difficulties to those organizing military supply programs into a more unified machine. In this respect, Supply Corps officers are meeting in conference with their Service counterparts and are studying and resolving many of the highly technical and broadened areas of military supply support. It is quite heartening to note that progress is being made today by the Services in the elimination of the "unnecessary" and the improvement of the "essential." Further, supply planners are organizing a more smooth-running supply organization which is designed not only to meet current needs but also is capable of immediate expansion.

Within the Navy, the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts is the "business" bureau of the Naval Establishment and the Supply Corps officer is the Navy's "business man." Since the end of World War II the Bureau has recognized that it is imperative that the Supply Corps officer be not only fully versed in his general duties but that he also be a skilled technician in one of such functional specialties as accounting, procurement, retail merchandising, operational planning, inventory control, and transportation. To meet the challenging problems of the post-war broadened supply program, there has been developed a detailed career planning program designed to further train Supply Corps officers in all phases of military distribution, military finance, and supply management.

Both the active Corps of some 3,000 officers and the inactive reserves totaling some 16,000 officers, are participating in this career-planned educational program. For the regular officer, the program emphasizes intensive technical instruction. This begins for everyone at the Navy Supply Corps School, Bayonne, N. J. After varied experience on-the-job afloat and ashore, groups of officers each year attend a wide variety of Service, professional, and civilian schools of higher learning. Advanced training usually includes postgraduate instruction at civilian universities such as Harvard and Stanford, study of Service technical schools, and finally specialized instruction at very advanced Service colleges. For the reserves, organized meetings are held monthly at which professional subjects and advanced supply information is discussed. Later, this professional information is practically examined during regular two-week training periods.

This career planning within the Supply Corps and the technical broadening of supply concepts work in mutual harmony in insuring the Navy the very best of men and materials for the implementation of adequate supply support. By keeping itself mentally strong and technically advanced, the Supply Corps is dedicated to peace but, at the same time, is ready to assume a fighting position on the defense team whenever and wherever called upon to do so.

U. S. COAST GUARD

VICE Adm. Merlin O'Neill, Coast Guard Commandant, has ordered all Coast Guard vessels in commission to dress ship on 22 May in honor of National Maritime Day.

Admiral O'Neill said, "It augurs well that deficiencies in our Merchant Marine are now being partially corrected by construction of the first passenger liners to be built since the war's end."

Flag Officer Legislation

never lost precedence or numbers as a result of being passed over."

Asked by Chairman Vinson whether the suggested amendments will slow or accelerate attrition, Admiral Roper said they would accelerate it during the next five years but slow down after that time. As for captains, Admiral Roper said the amendments would affect 40 officers who had lost precedence because of the non-promotion of their contemporaries.

Chairman Vinson advanced the idea that the President will use the channel of the proposed legislation to ease the officers out in a "more kindly way" than by the plucking method.

Admiral Roper said an entire new section should be added to the bill as follows:

"As soon as practicable after 30 June 1950, the Secretary of the Navy shall convene a board of not less than five officers of the Regular Navy of the grade of rear admiral or above to consider and recommend for continuation on the active list officers of the line of the Regular Navy not restricted by law in the performance of duty serving in that grade on 30 June 1948, and who on that date had completed 29 or more years of total commissioned service as defined in section 102 of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947, as amended, and whose names are not on a promotion list. Such officers recommended for continuation on the active list in the report of such board, as approved by the Secretary of the Navy, shall be so continued under the provisions of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947, as amended. Each such officer not so recommended shall be placed on the retired list on the first day of the sixth month following the month of enactment of this Act with retired pay at the rate of 24 per centum of his basic pay on the active list at the time of retirement, multiplied by the number of years of service for which entitled to credit in the computation of his pay on the active list, not to exceed a total of 75 per centum of said basic pay: Provided, That a fractional year of six months or more shall be considered a full year in computing the number of years of service by which the rate of 24 per centum is multiplied: Provided further, That nothing in this section shall be held to reduce the retired rank or pay to which such officer would be entitled under other provisions of law."

Admiral Roper gave the following reason for this addition:

"As the law (Section 316(h) P.L. 381) now stands, a captain who was in that grade on 30 June 1948 and had 29 or more years of total commissioned service on that date cannot be retired until he has twice failed of selection for promotion to rear admiral. Consequently, such a captain who has lost precedence or numbers because he has not been selected for promotion with his contemporaries might be far down the list of captains and not be considered in the promotion zone until long after his contemporaries who were promoted in due course to captain or flag rank may have been retired, by reason of the operation of the Act and the amendments of this bill.

"The officers who are recommended for retention under this new section would not be retired until they have been considered twice by a selection board, in accordance with the provisions of Section 316(h) of the Officer Personnel Act."
